WOOD SPECIES

1. CHERRY

Cherry's smooth, tight-grain, rich color, and stability have won high favor for use in kitchen cabinetry. Cherry ranges in color from white to deep red-brown. It is exceptionally stable & unsurpassed in its finishing qualities. Cherry's color deepens, with age due to its unique photosensitivity.

2. MAPLE

Maple is a strong, evenly-textured wood with a natural luster. While it is very uniform, you will notice random mineral streaks, worm tracks, or birds-eye patterns. The grain is primarily straight, but can be wavy at times. Maple is a closed-grain wood that sands to a very smooth finish. As it ages, maple will take on a golden hue. Due to the density & hardness of maple, natural expansion & contraction may be more apparent at joints than with softer hardwoods.

3. HICKORY

Hickory is a relatively smooth hardwood chosen for its dramatic color and shade variation and its prominent grain. Color can vary from nearly white to medium-brown. Bird pecks, small pin knots, and mineral streaks are common in hickory.

4. RUSTIC

Rustic Hickory is a relatively smooth hardwood chosen for its dramatic color and shade variation and its prominent grain. Color can vary from nearly white to medium-brown. Bird pecks, small pin knots, and mineral streaks are common in hickory.

5. OAK

Red oak is strong, warm, and open-grained. Because of oak's open grain it has a semi-smooth feel after it has been finished. Oak stains easily and evenly with a pronounced grain. Some color variation from reddish-tan to medium-brown is possible in its natural state. Occasional pin knots and mineral streaks are also characteristic of oak.

6. THERMAFOIL

Produced using a high quality 3/4" MDF "Medium Density Fiberboard". After door preparation, the MDF is wrapped with a durable vinyl like product "Thermafoil", by using a combination of heat and pressure.

7. TRUE TOUCH

Built from revolutionary alternative materials, True Touch gives you the perfect embossed texture of stained wood. Components are always environmentally safe & low maintenance. Made from engineered wood that is stable & robustly built, these materials completely eliminate the concern of expansion and contraction.

8. MDF

MDF is made from an engineered wood product with a consistent core and a smooth surface. More durable than solid hardwoods, MDF is more resistant to warping, expansion and contraction than other hardwoods.

THE ART OF GLAZING

Artist Brush Glaze

Improved Consistency

Now that glazing has become available on almost every door style in the Legacy line up, more and more glazed standard overlay products are being ordered. In order to keep the consistency between the door and the face frame, we have developed a new technique, which we call "The Artists Brush". As we all know, no two doors are alike but this technique allows us to individually work on each component one at a time, developing a distinct accent. These artistic hand painted accents emphasize the details of each profile in its own unique way.

Old-World Hand-Crafted Glaze *

Consistently Inconsistent

The true art of flood glazing involves an hand wiped technique that in some cases leaves behind an overlay of color, as well as accented tones of glazing in the corners and recesses of the door. As seen in the pictures, our goal is to create a specific look that we like to call, "Consistently, Inconsistent". No two doors will look alike. Our new flood glaze process will cover the entire finished exterior of the cabinet, face frames and end panels included.
